

Don Williams Volume 2 January 1974

Don Williams' Volume Two Second solo album after leaving the Pozo-Seco singers was originally released in January of 1974. Produced by Allen Reynolds and arranged by Chuck Cochrane, this album, along with Volume One, defined Williams' signature style: an emphasis on melodies that are equally folk, country, and pop, delivered with the remarkable ease of Williams' warm, honeyed voice. Volumes One and Two are sonically similar, and both are a mixture of Williams' original songs and tunes written by Alan Reynolds, Bob McDill, and Mickey Newbury. Although Don Williams' streak of chart-topping singles began after Volumes One and Two, these albums can be credited with laying the groundwork of commercial and artistic success for the artist, and establishing a sound that riveted audiences for decades to come.
