

Don Williams New Moves January, 1986

*Considered one of the most sonically different albums for Don Williams, New Moves, released on January 17, 1986, is one of two Don Williams albums released on Capitol Records. Consciously shifting directions, this album combines Williams' signature and traditional country sound with horn sections, subtle piano, and soul-styled bass. Even while experimenting, Williams never strays far from his roots, and New Moves is at heart a country album. Released as the second single from this album, "Heartbeat in the Darkness" became Don Williams' seventeenth and final number one hit, spending a total of thirteen weeks on the chart. "We've Got a good Fire Goin,'" and "Then It's Love" reached number three, while "Senorita" and "It's Time for Love" reached numbers nine and twenty respectively.*
